

Engineer Develops Thermosuit For Rapid Cooling Of Critically Ill Patients

William Ohley, who has taught in the URI College of Engineering for 28 years, joined with medical colleagues in Louisiana and New Jersey to form Life Recovery Systems after developing what they call the Thermosuit

Published on : Tue, 6 May 2008