
ER Physicians Don't Follow Clinical Guidelines For Diagnosing Possible Pulmonary Emboli, Study Suggests

Current accepted clinical practice indicates that patients with a low clinical suspicion for PE should undergo D-dimer testing, then MDCT if positive. A total of 5,344 patients were reviewed.

Published on : Thu, 28 May 2009