

German Hospitals in Construction Fever

SEPTEMBER 2013
HAMBURG, GERMANY

Germany's hospitals are currently experiencing a construction boom: Whether its renovation, expansion or even new construction - the number of construction projects at German healthcare facilities is currently higher than at any time for 35 years with more than 1050 projects currently being implemented.

These were the findings of a study conducted by the corporate consultancy company Schwab Marketing (Source: kma report on construction and planning 2013).

The "Hospital Build & Infrastructure Europe" (HBIE) trade fair from 3 to 4 September 2013 in Hamburg will show how hospitals can use redevelopments and conversion projects to make themselves fit for the future.

Three accompanying congresses, more than 60 exhibitor stands and two intensive workshops are awaiting specialist visitors to this international event. 40 speakers from Europe, the USA and Asia will shed light on the very latest opportunities for the new construction and renovation of hospitals, present their successful projects and discuss financing options in their - simultaneously translated - presentations.

The trade fair programme can be viewed on the internet at: <http://bit.ly/hbe-de>

Published on : Thu, 22 Aug 2013