

New Interventional Technique May Save Eyesight

Since treating retinoblastoma can involve removing affected eyes to keep the cancer from spreading, this represents a significant advance. Researchers were able to save 75% of the eyes in 22 patients they treated, and preserved vision in half of them.

Published on : Tue, 18 Mar 2008