

New MRI Technique Detects Cancerous Breast Tumours

Oregon Health & Science University researchers are developing a new breast cancer screening method that will likely reduce or eliminate unnecessary biopsy surgeries. Their findings are published in the current issue of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

The research effort, led by Charles Springer, Ph.D., uses a Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) technique and the researchers

Published on : Wed, 12 Nov 2008