

Radar Healthcare appoints former CEO of NICE to board

We are thrilled to announce the appointment of Gillian Leng CBE to our board of non-executive directors. With over 30 years of experience working across public health, healthcare, and social care, within life science industries, patient organisations, local and national government, and academia, Professor Leng will be a valued addition to our board.

Professor Leng's expertise and insight into the industry and our shared goal of enhancing patient safety outcomes will better position us for becoming even more innovative and people-focused.

Professor Leng says: "I'm excited to be working with Radar Healthcare to support its growth with key healthcare strategies.

"Throughout my career, I've focused on searching for the clinical evidence to not only inspire change but to also make that change long-lasting so it can directly benefit patients.

"As the health sector undergoes its digital transformation, technology partners such as Radar Healthcare are playing an increasingly vital role in providing the evidence needed to enable informed decisions and positive change – ultimately helping to deliver better patient outcomes."

Paul Johnson, CEO of Radar Healthcare, says: "We're delighted to welcome Professor Gillian Leng to the team. Her career, and the long list of accomplishments she's earned along the way, are nothing short of remarkable. Her unique perspective and experience, along with a vision we both share about the role of technology and its ability to provide healthcare insights to deliver better patient outcomes, will play a key role in our continued success."
