

Russian Society of Radiology Announces Strategic Information Partnership With HealthManagement

The Russian Society of Radiology has announced a strategic information partnership with HealthManagement. The agreement will benefit every member of the Russian Society of Radiology with free access to the journal and online knowledgebase of HealthManagement.

Russian Society of Radiology President, Professor Valentin Sinitsyn, said, “We are delighted to be partnering with HealthManagement to offer our members free access to this unique publication. Management and leadership skills are vital for radiologists and this resource offers key information for our members.”

HealthManagement is Europe’s leading portal on healthcare management and leadership. The journal is distributed worldwide with a circulation of over 60,000, and is complemented by an online knowledgebase of 100,000+ articles.

The publication is invaluable to radiologists and other healthcare professionals from all disciplines involved in managing hospital departments and private practices, offering quality assurance, good practice and case studies from across the world. The content also provides useful information for trainees and students looking to widen their knowledge of all sectors.

Executive Director of HealthManagement Christian Marolt said “We are very pleased to be collaborating with the Russian Society of Radiology, as we know members will enjoy reading HealthManagement and will find it an invaluable resource for researching best practice and gaining management knowledge and advice.”

Project Director of HealthManagement Iphigenia Papaioanou said, “ This partnership is a new confirmation how important it is to share management and leadership information across the world. We are delighted to count the Russian Society amongst our community”

From March 2017 each member of the Russian society will receive HealthManagement.org The Journal and full access to the online knowledgebase at <http://www.healthmanagement.org>.

Image: L-R: Christian Marolt (HealthManagement), Prof. Valentin Sinitsyn (Russian Society of Radiology), Iphigenia Papaioanou (HealthManagement)

About the Russian Society of Radiology

- The Russian Society of Radiology (RSR) celebrated its centenary this year, and has more than 1500 members. The Society unifies not only radiologists but also nuclear medicine and ultrasound specialists, oncology radiation specialists, medical physicists and radiographers.
- The RSR sees its main task as generally improving radiology in Russia and bringing it closer to international standards. It pays special attention to problems in training and education of radiologists, and to the creation of professional guidelines and standards.

About HealthManagement

HealthManagement.org is a comprehensive print, digital and social media platform dedicated to promoting management, leadership, best practice and cross-collaboration in healthcare. With the active engagement from thought leaders and well-respected national and international associations, HealthManagement provides comprehensive information related to clinical practice, hospital administration, latest research, technology advances, major practice challenges and valuable management tips.

Published on : Wed, 29 Mar 2017