
Thomas H. Lee Partners Appoints Paul Black As a Consultant for Healthcare Group

Thomas H. Lee Partners, L.P. ("THL"), a premier private equity firm investing in middle-market growth companies announced the appointment of Paul Black as a consultant for the firm's healthcare investment group. Black, who brings more than 25 years of experience leading companies in healthcare information technology ("Healthcare IT"), will support the team's efforts in identifying, sourcing, and growing investment opportunities across the healthcare market.

"We are very pleased to welcome Paul to THL as a consultant for the firm's healthcare group," said Shahab Vagefi, Managing Director at THL. "THL has had a longstanding focus in healthcare and technology. As we continue finding investment opportunities at the intersection of these industries, Paul's significant experience creating and executing a strategic vision for businesses in Healthcare IT will be greatly beneficial as we add more high-quality companies seeking to improve the healthcare ecosystem to our portfolio."

In this role, Black will support the healthcare group in deal sourcing, due diligence for potential investments, and developing new relationships with founders and management teams across the healthcare landscape. He will also serve as an advisor to portfolio companies to support their growth.

"THL's thesis-driven approach and dedicated focus on Healthcare IT has enabled it to work with unique companies across the healthcare landscape," said Paul Black. "I am pleased to join such an exceptional team and look forward to advancing the firm's strategy."

Prior to joining THL, Black served 10 years as a Director and CEO of Allscripts, a global leader in healthcare information technology solutions. Before that, he was the COO of Cerner Corporation for more than a decade. Black is currently a director of HealthEquity, Community CareLink, The Advancement Board University of Kansas Health System and The Harry S. Truman Presidential Library & Museum.
